1988
The Broadway Symphony
and
The Seattle Chamber Singers
George Shangrow, Conductor

Apr. 1:  J. S. Bach's St. John Passion
        7:00 pm  Meany Hall, UW

Apr. 10: Bach's Music from the Court at Kothen II
         2:00 pm  Olympic 4 Seasons Hotel

May 8:  Bach's Music from the Court at Kothen III
        2:00 pm  Olympic 4 Seasons Hotel

May 15: Orchestral works by Mozart, Holst, Robert Kechley
        8:00 pm  Kane Hall, UW

Jun. 5:  Schubert Mass in E-Flat
         VaughanWilliams Flos Campi
         8:00 pm  Kane Hall, UW

For concert details and ticket information call 547-0427
The collaboration of the BROADWAY SYMPHONY and the SEATTLE CHAMBER SINGERS has become a respected musical force in the Pacific Northwest. This company of volunteer artists is dedicated to the presentation of exciting and polished musical performances. Each ensemble rehearses at University Unitarian Church, where they enjoy the status of artists-in-residence, and where they further develop their repertoire under conductor George Shangrow. Membership is by audition, and general auditions for vacant positions are held every August and September. On several occasions each season, smaller ensembles are formed from the main ensembles for the performance of chamber music. Especially important to the Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers is the support and presentation of local performing artists and the work of local composers.

GEORGE SHANGROW, Music Director and Conductor of the Broadway Symphony and Seattle Chamber Singers, is a native of Seattle who founded the chorus (in 1968) and the orchestra (in 1978) in order to give Seattle artists and audiences a chance to hear and perform great works of music. In addition to acclaimed performances of the classical music repertoire for both chorus and orchestra, he has brought to Seattle world premieres of operas, choral works, and symphonies by Seattle's most gifted local composers. Mr. Shangrow has toured Europe as a conductor and keyboard artist; appeared as a guest conductor with the Seattle Symphony, the Northwest Chamber Orchestra, and East Texas University Opera; and lectures frequently for the Seattle Opera and Symphony. As Director of Music for University Unitarian Church, Mr. Shangrow is a leader in the performance of sacred music, and as the guiding producer of The Bach Year in Seattle (1985) he brought to our city the world's most extensive celebration of the music of J. S. Bach.

Baritone BRIAN BOX is a native of Washington and received his Master of Music degree in vocal performance from Western Washington University. He recently performed Songs of a Wayfarer for a performance of Nursey and Friends with the Oregon Symphony under the direction of Maestro Shangrow. Mr. Box has performed with the Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers in such works as Bach's Christmas Oratorio, Coffee Cantata, Peasant Cantata, and Hunting Cantata. He has also sung for two years with Seattle Opera's Education Program, performing children's opera throughout the state.

The Young Chang is the official piano of the Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers. They are provided for us by Western Piano & Organ, Young Chang's largest representative in the United States.

THE BROADWAY SYMPHONY/SEATTLE CHAMBER SINGERS
George Shangrow, conductor
Sara Hedgpeth, business manager
2115 North 42nd
Seattle, WA 98103
(206) 547-0427

The Broadway Symphony
George Shangrow, conductor

VIOLIN
Anna Bezzo-Clark
Jeffrey Forbes
Debbie Kirkland
Fritz Klein, concertmaster
Eileen Lusk
Sally Macklin
Avron Maletsky
Jeanne Nadreau
Lyle-Ivar Pedersen, principal second
Phyllis Rowe
Sondra Schink
Erich Schweiger
Kenna Smith
Gayle Strandberg
Myrnie Van Kempen

VIOLA
Beatrice Dolf
Katherine McWilliams
Timothy Prior
Stephanie Read
Robert Shangrow
Katrina Sharples
Sam Williams, principal
Nancy Winder

CELLO
Gary Anderson
Rosemary Berner
Matthew Birkeland
Colleen Loewen
Norma Meyers
Rebecca Parker
Joan Selvig
Maryann Tapio, principal
Julie Reed Wheeler

BASS
David Couch, principal
Allan Goldman
Josephine Hansen
Anna Pal
Jay Wilson

FLUTE
Claudia Cooper
Janeen Shigley, principal
Suzanne Walker

OBOE
Huntley Beyer
M. Shannon Hill, principal

CLARINET
Kathleen Boone
Gary Oules, principal

BASS CLARINET
Jerome Vinitkov

BASSOON
Daniel Hershman
William Schink, principal

CONTRABASSOON
Michel Jolivet

HORN
Laurie Heidt
William Hunnicutt
Cynthia Jefferson, principal
Beverly Southwell

TRUMPET
Matthew Dalton, principal
Gary Fladmo

TROMBONE
William Bravold
Michael Perkins

BASS TROMBONE
William Irving

HARP
Naomi Kato

TIMPANI
Dan Oie

PERCUSSION
Ian Alvarez

PERSONNEL MANAGER
Eileen Lusk

LIBRARIAN
Timothy Prior

STAGE MANAGER
Ron Haight

RECORDING ENGINEER
Dr. Rick Lyman

The Broadway Symphony has the policy of regular rotation for orchestral seating; therefore our personnel are listed alphabetically in each section.
THE BROADWAY SYMPHONY
George Shangrow, conductor

Sunday, March 13, 1988
Kane Hall

PROGRAM

Haydn

Ionia concertante
Allegro
Andante
Allegro con spirito

Franz Joseph Haydn

Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen
Wenn mein Schatz Hochzeit macht
Ging heut morgen übers Feld
Ich hab‘ ein glühend Messer
Die zwei blauen Augen von meinem Schatz

Gustav Mahler

INTERMISSION

Symphony No. 3, "The Camp Meeting"
"Old Folks Gatherin':" Andante maestoso
"Children’s Day:" Allegro
"Communion:" Largo

Charles Ives

King Stephen Overture

Ludwig Van Beethoven

The Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers would deeply appreciate your gift of support. Contributions may be sent to: BS/SCS, 2115 N. 42nd, Seattle, WA 98103, (206) 547-0127.
PROGRAM NOTES
by Gary Fladmoes

Franz Joseph Haydn - Sinfonia Concertante in B-Flat Major, Opus 84

The Sinfonia Concertante received its first performance on March 9, 1792 at the fourth of the Haydn-Salomon concerts. It is speculated that Salomon persuaded Haydn to write the work because of the popularity of the form as seen in the works of Ignaz Pleyel, Haydn's pupil, who had been enticed to come to London by a group called Professional Concerts. This group was engaged in a bitter rivalry with Salomon for pre-eminence among concert promoters in London.

Professional Concerts had decided that bringing Pleyel to London would be a counter-attraction to Haydn’s popularity in London. The desired rivalry never developed. Pleyel arrived in London on December 23, 1791, dined with his former master a day later, and spent New Year’s Eve with Haydn. Haydn, in a letter of January 17, 1792 wrote to Marianne von Genzinger in Vienna: "He (Pleyel) conducted himself from the time he got here with such modesty that he won my heart all over again; we see a great deal of each other, share laurels, and shall return home happy and contented." He went on to write of Pleyel’s promise to bring out a new work at each of his concerts: "I stated in public that I would do as much. To keep my word and not let poor Salomon down, I have had to spend several sleepless nights." Hence, it was undoubtedly because Pleyel had presented a new Sinfonia Concertante for six instruments and orchestra on February 27 that Salomon was prompted to urge Haydn to write a similar work of his own.

Further credence is given to the above incident’s role in motivating Haydn to compose a sinfonia concertante. A review of Pleyel’s work published after the premier performance read: "The novelty of the evening was a Concertante by Pleyel, for six instruments. The subject extremely easy, airy and well calculated for the obligato of the different instruments which succeed each another - all varied with profound skill and producing the most delightful effects....Of....the Concertante it will be sufficiency of praise to say, that Haydn might own with honour these works of his. It was the triumph of both - the Master was there seemingly proud of his Work; the Scholar himself only second, was very sensibly affected by the applause."

The March 9 premiere of Haydn’s venture into the form was so successful, a repeat performance was scheduled, due to audience demand, for the very next Salomon concert. First programmed as a “New Concerto M.S. for Violin, Violoncello, Oboe, and Bassoon by Haydn,” the title was changed to Concertante for its second performance. It was also included in the repertoire for the Haydn/Salomon concerts in the 1794 concert season. The Sinfonia Concertante is a work in three movements in the central key of B-flat Major, a favorite key of Haydn’s for many of his later works. It was also regarded as a novelty to write for trumpets and drums in the key of B-flat Major. The French musical writer, Marc Vignal, points out that Mozart never did, and he (Vignal) could only recall a single symphony of Haydn that employed that scoring practice in the key of B-flat.

The first movement, Allegro, counterparts two elements, a supple tone heard at the beginning of the work and contrasted with a series of energetic outbursts. A cadenza leads into the close of the movement. The second movement, Andante, is a duet in F Major, first for violin and bassoon and then for oboe and ‘cello, all over a pizzicato accompaniment in the strings.

The finale, Allegro con spirito, has barely begun when the solo violin interrupts with

OUR CONTRIBUTORS AND PATRONS

SUSTAINER (over $500)

Richard Deyer

BENEFACTORS ($250-$500)

Addison’s
Gary Anderson
Carol Blakey
The Boeing Company
Consulate of the Federal Republic of Germany
Stan & Anu Dinhmar
Beatrice Dolf
Dean Drescher
Fifth Avenue Records
Kathe Kern/Brian McGee
SAFECO Insurance Companies
Richard & Nancy Taw

PATRON ($100-$249)

Anonymous
Dr. Hugh Beebe
M. & V. Chaloupka
Crisa Cugini
Norma Cugini
Kathleen Dyer
Maurine Eggertson
Paul Eggertson
Robert E. Frey
Pamela Hill
Fred S. James & Co.
Alan K. Jones
Frederick W. Klein
Alice Leighton
Ruth Libby
Avron Malieszky
Janet & William Mock
Timothy Prior
Nancy Robinson
Kenneth Rogstad
Liesel Rombouts
Theodore Samuel & Rotary
David Savage/Laurie Medill
Larry Scott
Seafirst National Bank
Katrina Sharpless
T. Dwight Swafford
Washington Mutual Bank
Julie Reid Wheeler

SPONSOR ($50-$99)

Anonymous
Stephanie Belanger
Vance Blackwell
Bill Blackwell
Josephine Cugini
Alex Cugini
Bruce Danielson
Ben Eggertson
George Egger
Henry Eilen
Stacy Hagen
Karen & Tom Hammond
Brenda Hogarth
Leon & Dorothy Hopper
Eugene Horton & Assoc.
Rick Kosen Agency
Robert & Eileen Lukm
Charles & Viola Lutz
Suzanne Means
Scott Moline
Phil Mortenson
Jeanne Nadreau

Ray & Rita Nadreau
Tom Nesbit
Gary Oates
Joan Selvig
Neda Slaesson
Gary Stimac
Wes Uhman & Assoc.
Reba & David Urvsky
George Wallerstein
David Walter
Earl & Bernice Wheatley

FRIEND ($25-$49)

Kary Addison
Dave Agerholth
Phylis Alipon
Byron & Pauline Anderson
William Appel
Christina Bamms
Teny & Rich Berner
Arthur & Donna Bestor
Michael Blackwell
Jan Bowserox
Robert & Nancy Brown
Ann Forest Burns
Mr. & Mrs. Doug Caley
David Calof
R.C. Christiaw
Annette Cleaves
Jane Crigger
Cathy Cugini
Robert Cugini
Nancy Cunhwa
Mary Dav
Michelle DeMaris
Gloria Derbawka
John Edwards
Laurie Eggertson
Sam Eggertson, M.D.
Keith Enderby
Toby Fast, Sr.
First Hill Diagnostic Ctr.
Nancy Goodman
Vera Groom
Ron & Barbara Hammond
Helen Hammond
Jim Hattori
Jackie Hightower
M. Shannon Hill
Debra Holland
Ehlel Holmes
Donnes & Greta Irvine
Mamie-Angnknn
Nolan Jones
Barbara Krohn
Eleanor Lester
James Loutz
Margaret Loeders
Robert Luk
Maxine MacHugh
Margaret Marshall
Kathie Martens
Randall Jay McCarty
Chris Meyers
James Michaelangelo
Daniel & Grace Morris
Catherine Mortenson
David Moss & Assoc.
Margaret Murphy
Carol Neiman
Jason Niggel/Tracia Kolar
B.J. & Chris Ohlsweiler
David Orvold
Bruce & Gretchen Parker

Deborah Parsons
Barb & Dick Philen
Ronald Phillips
Mary F. Read
Dick Reed
Suzanne Ruff
Gerald Sams
P. W. Schol
Walter Siegmund
Libby Sinclair
Steve Sommer
Brian Peter Stipek
Shear Style
Claire Thomas
Doreen & Tom Tumblin
Delores Veleius
Kay Verleyis
Mary Vess
Donna Weller
Mrs. A.R. Winder
Donna Wolthius
Micki Zontz

ASSOCIATE (to $24.00)

Lynn Adams
Laila Adams
Stacy Allen
Megan Alexander
Cielito Alameda
Roberto Alschul
Baldwin & Dorothy Anclaus
Tinkaise Anciaw
Anonymous
Judith Arnett
Jeanne Ashton
Don & Virginia Aylesworth
Carina Baertsch
Larry Barker
David Barnes
Paula Barta
Myna Barthele
Robb & Rachel Bascomb
Susan P. Bauer
Debra Baum
Emily Bean
Sally Becker
Ced Bergquist
Lavinita Berner
Virginia Bishop
Carla Black
Sue Black
Andrew Blackwell
Tanis Bloom
Jim Bollinger
Mrs. George Boone
Tom Brazias
Julie Breidt
Bill & Arlene Brown
Anna M. Buck
Grace Byrne
Kim Carnbern
Carol Canfield
Dan Christensen
Gary Churchhill
Marcia Aparacida Ciel
Jean & Dorothy Clark
Florence Clarke
Rachel Clifton
Linda Cole
Charles Conway
Joyce Cooper
Mike Cooper
John Compass
Dexter Day
2. Ging heut morgen übers Feld
Ging heut morgen übers Feld,
Du noch bei mir Gelegenheit.
Sprach zu mir der lust'ge Fink:
Es ist Gefühl? Guten Morgen! Es gibt?
Da ward's nicht eine schöne Welt?
Zicklein! Schön und liiklich.
Wie mir die Welt gefällt?
Auch die Glocken um mich Füß
Hat mir lustig, guter Ding'!
Mit den Glücklichen, klirr, klirr, klirr;
Ihrem Morgen eine Messe.
Wie's nicht eine schöne Welt?
Kling, kling, Schönheit Ding'!
Wie mir die Welt gefällt?
Halt!
Und da fing im Sonnenchens Gleich die Welt zu funken an.
Alles Ton und Farbe gewann
Im Sonnenchenschens
Blum' und Vogel, groß und klein!
Guten Tag, ist's nicht eine schöne Welt?
Es du, geht, Schönheit Welt?
Nun längst auch mein Glück wohl an?
Nein, ja, dass, ich mein,
Mir summert blühten kaum!

3. Ich hab ein glänzend Messer
Ich hab ein glänzend Messer,
Ein Messer in meiner Brust,
O wohl Das schmeckt so tof
In jede Flasche und jede Lust.
Ach, was ist das für ein böser Gast!
Nimmer hält er Ruhe,
Nimmer hält er Rast,
Nie bei Tag, noch bei Nacht,
Wenn ich schlafe.
O Welt!
Wenn ich in den Himmel seh,
Seht, ich zwei blasse Augen stehn,
O Welt, wenn ich im gelben Felde geh,
Seht, ich von einem das blonde Haar
Im Weide wehne.
O Welt!
Wenn ich aus dem Traum aufhabe
Und höre Morgen ihr silbernen Lachen,
O Welt!
Ich wünsch', ich liege auf der schwarzen Bahn', Könnt' nimmer die Augen aufmachen!

4. Die zwei blauen Augen von meinem Schatz
Die zwei blauen Augen von meinem Schatz,
Sie haben mich in die weite Welt geschickt,
Da mache ich Abschied nehmen,
Vom allerliebsten Platz!
O Augen blau, warum hast du mich angeleckt?
Nun hab ich ewig Leid und Grämen.
Ich bin ausgesungen in stiller Nacht
Wohl über die dunkle Heide
Hat niemand Arme gesagt?
Adel! Mein Gesell, war Lied und Leidet!
Auf der Straße steht ein Lindenbaum,
Da hab ich zum ersten Male im Schlaf geruht
Unter dem Linden, der hat
Seine Blumen über mich geschenkt,
Da ward ich nicht, wie das Leben tut,
War alles, war alles, war Leid
Und Welt und Traum!

a recitative-like passage, a dramatic effect which Haydn had used in his early works and which Beethoven used in the Ninth Symphony. The principal theme soon returns and, after its development, is again interrupted by the recitative idea as a pointer to the grand close.

Charles Ives - Symphony No. 3, “The Camp Meeting”

As this writer has mentioned on a prior occasion, scholars will probably continue to debate whether Charles Ives was a musical genius or simply a successful insurance man who dabbled in musical things, succeeding, because of his uniqueness, in creating the illusion of greatness. That debate may never be settled, but in the meantime, audiences continue to enjoy and respect his music.

In an essay on Emerson, Ives possibly summed up his own artistic view when he wrote: “His (Emerson’s) underlying plan of work seems based on the large unity of a series of particular aspects of a subject rather than on the continuity of its expression. As thoughts surge to his mind, he fills the heavens with them, crowds them in, if necessary, but seldom arranges them along the ground first.”

One hallmark of the music of Ives is its ability to capture or recreate in sound life experiences, many of which included actual music. Hence, the musical quotation became a prominent device. Every type of musical source material was fair game for Ives, as was every kind of performance. He seemed to delight in the sounds created by mix-ups, mistakes, wrong notes, and out-of-tune playing of amateur musicians, regarding it to be as “substantial” and “musical” as the perfection of professional musicians. In his instructions to his copyist for “The Fourth of July,” the third of his New England Holidays, Ives warned, “Mr. Price: please don’t try to make things nice! All the wrong notes are right. Just copy as I have - I want it that way....Mr. Price: Band stuff - they didn’t always play right together & was good either way.”

When his Three Places in New England was first performed and the conductor, Nicolas Slonimsky, apologized for the ragged performance, Ives responded, “Just like a town meeting - every man for himself. Wonderful how it came out.”

Ives wrote four symphonies, the first in 1896 and the last between 1910 and 1916. The most famous is the Third Symphony, subtitled “The Camp Meeting.” Ives worked on the piece between 1901 and 1912, and it is generally believed to have been completed in 1904. It was not heard for more than forty years after its completion when Lou Harrison conducted the premiere in New York City on April 5, 1946. That performance met with critical acclaim. The work was so respected that it not only received the New York Music Critics Circle award for 1946, it was also awarded the Pulitzer Prize for music.

The inspiration for the work, and hence its subtitle, came out of Ives’ experiences at camp meetings which were popular in Danbury, Connecticut, where Ives grew up. The work features hymn tune quotations throughout. In the first movement, Andante maestoso, the hymn “O For a Thousand Tongues” highlights the movement in a grand fugal treatment.

In the second movement, Largo, Ives explained that his intention was to depict a game played by children at the camp meeting while their elders are listening to the Holy Word. The finale, Allegro, uses “Just Am I” as its principal theme.

The use of cross rhythms, unusual progressions, and unorthodox tonalities long before it became a norm for avant-garde musical expression made the Ives Third Symphony stylistically remarkable. Just how unique the man was is perhaps best bested by Visual Thomson when he wrote that Ives “makes up his music out of whole cloth at home. He invents his own aesthetic. When his works turns out to be not unplayable technically, it often gives a useful kick in the pants to the professional tradition. The music of...Charles Ives did that very vigorously indeed.”
Ludwig van Beethoven - Overture to "King Stephen", Opus 117

A year after completing the overture to "Egmont" in 1810, Ludwig van Beethoven received a commission for the composition of a large amount of music for the stage. A new theater was to be opened in Pest, Hungary late in 1811. Beethoven, upon receiving the offer in the spring of 1811, accepted the commission and set to work. The dramatist, Kotzebue, had been commissioned to write new theatrical works for the opening and sent a packet of the plays to Beethoven. Kotzebue had evidently worked quickly to complete his commissions. The drama commission had originally been offered to Collin who turned it down, citing the short notice given to complete the requested dramas.

Beethoven must have worked equally quickly. Within three weeks of accepting the commission, he had completed nineteen works, some of which were of considerable length. He had worked in ill health and under the pressure that the opening was to be on October 1 of 1811. He sent his completed works to Pest on the 13th of September. It turned out to be plenty of time. The new theater did not open until February of 1812.

The gala opening of the new theater featured the performance of three of Kotzebue's dramas. The first, described as the Prologue, was entitled "King Stephen" or "Hungary's First Benefactor." The second, entitled "The elevation of Pest to be a Royal Sanctuary" was a replacement piece for a drama that turned out to be politically sensitive at the time. The final play was called an Epilogue and was entitled "The Ruins of Athens."

The report of the opening as published in Vienna on February 19, 1812, read, "The newly built Royal Municipal Theatre in Pest, having been completed with the utmost splendour, was opened ceremoniously on the 9th February. The opening performance, graced by tasteful external and internal lighting, commenced with a new Prologue with choruses... the conclusion was an Epilogue with songs and choruses... The Prologue and Epilogue were written specially for this occasion, upon request, by the celebrated dramatic poet Herr von Kotzebue, and were set to music by our praiseworthy composer van Beethoven. The audience was extremely large, and the applause general."

The overture to "King Stephan" and the overture and incidental music to "The Ruins of Athens" survive to the present day, but their success can hardly be described as overwhelming. Only the "Turkish March" from "The Ruins of Athens" and the two overtures were published during Beethoven's time. He later sold the two overtures to the Philharmonic Society of London as new works, so disappointing the Society that they instructed their agent, "for God's sake, don't buy anything from Beethoven."

The drama of "King Stephan" celebrates the role that King Stephan I played in Hungarian history and then transfers that celebration to praise of Maria Theresa and the Emperor Franz. Beethoven's overture is festive and celebrative in its tone. The tempo changes give it form - slow, fast, slow, fast - with the musical materials of each opening section returning with the later changes of tempo. The mood is light and festive, leaving the listener in a similar state.

Gustav Mahler - Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen (Songs of a Wayfarer)

In 1875 Gustav Mahler travelled to Vienna to attend the Conservatory. Upon graduation, he embarked on a career as a conductor, leading orchestras for theaters and opera companies in small towns throughout Europe. As his reputation grew, he advanced to more prestigious appointments, coming at length to the leading opera houses in such cities as Prague, Leipzig, and Budapest. In 1897, Mahler became the maestro at the Vienna Court Opera. He conducted there with dictatorial control, but after ten years under Mahler's leadership, the Vienna Court Opera had been elevated to the pinnacle among Europe's opera companies.

Mahler's sojourn in Vienna brought him to the podium of the Vienna Philharmonic. He proved himself as skilled with the symphonic repertoire as he had with the opera literature. Along with the acclaim he received for his interpretive artistry also grew his reputation for unbending opinions of how works should be interpreted. His quest for perfection in performance often left him frustrated. It was frustration over what he viewed as continual compromise of artistic standards that led him to resign from the Vienna Court Opera in 1907. In January of 1908, Mahler made his debut in America, conducting the Metropolitan Opera on New Year's Day. The following year he became the principal conductor of the New York Philharmonic, a position he held along with his post at the Metropolitan Opera. The pressure, probably mostly self-imposed by his lofty standards, brought Mahler to the point of collapse in 1911. He left his conducting duties for treatment in Paris, but he knew the end had come and at his own request, returned to Vienna where he died on May 19, 1911.

Mahler has been described as continually suffering from Weltschmerz. Even, in writing about Mahler's emotional involvement with music, has said that Mahler "used tones to probe the meaning of life and death, to uncover the mysteries of nature. He was, it is true, often ecstatic and prophetic, often extravagantly subjective in his emotional outpourings. But he was also capable of nobility and grandeur of thought, profundity of concept, and intensity of emotion. Thus his greatest symphonies, while uneven in quality, are always a rewarding esthetic and emotional experience."

Mahler tended to approach all of his music as a symphonist, and he has been described as the last neo-Romantic in the form. He favors the orchestra as a medium of expression and the structures he devises are vast, allowing him to fill the vastness with his personal feelings, questions, doubts, and struggles with spiritual problems. It is significant that his principal works involve the orchestra. He wrote nine symphonies and a series of well-known song cycles for solo voice and orchestra. The Songs of A Wayfarer is one such cycle and is the first major work he composed, writing the cycle between 1883 and 1885.

Because of their scope, Mahler's song cycles have often been depicted as symphonies for solo voice and orchestra. Songs of A Wayfarer fit that mold nicely. The set of four songs which comprise the cycle are entitled, "Wenn mein Schatz Hochzeit macht," "Ging heut morgen übers Feld," "Ich hab' ein glühend Messer," and lastly, "Die zwei blauen Augen von meinem Schatz." The songs are based on Mahler's own poetry, and the theme of the cycle was inspired by a love affair Mahler had with a woman named Johanna Richter. The music of the cycle also figured prominently in his First Symphony. A melodic passage from the second song serves as the principal theme of the opening movement of the symphony. A refrain from the fourth song appears in the slow movement. And other thematic material from throughout the symphony appears in the first and last movements of the symphony. Mahler would utilize this practice in later symphonies by incorporating melodies from his other song cycles into them.

Although much of Mahler's music was often imposing in structure and required massive forces to perform. The Songs of A Wayfarer is delightfully simple and straightforward, possibly reflecting the joys of romance from a time in the composer's life when emotions were simple and his lifestyle uncomplicated.

Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen

(Words: Gustav Mahler)

Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen

(Text: Gustav Mahler)

When my sweethearts have her wedding,
I was her merry wedding,
I have my day of mourning,
I go into my life room.
Dark little room,
Weep, weep for my sweethearts,
For my dear sweethearts!
Flower of blue, flower of blue,
Do not wither, do not wither!
Sweet bird, sweet bad,
You are singing on the green heath.
Ah, how fair the world is!
Cheep! Cheep!
Do not sing! Do not flower!
Singing is over now!
All singing is done with.
At evening when I go to sleep,
I think of my now,
Of my now.
Ludwig van Beethoven - Overture to 'King Stephen', Opus 117

A year after completing the overture to 'Egmont' in 1810, Ludwig van Beethoven received a commission for the composition of a large amount of music for the stage. A new theater was to be opened in Pest, Hungary late in 1811. Beethoven, upon receiving the offer in the spring of 1811, accepted the commission and set to work. The dramatist, Kotzebue, had been commissioned to write new theatrical works for the opening and sent a packet of the plays to Beethoven. Kotzebue had evidently worked quickly to complete his commissions. The drama commission had originally been offered to Collin who turned it down, citing the short notice given to complete the requested dramas.

Beethoven must have worked equally quickly. Within three weeks of accepting the commission, he had completed nineteen works, some of which were of considerable length. He had worked in ill health and under the pressure that the opening was to be on October 1 of 1811. He sent his completed works to Pest on the 13th of September. It turned out to be plenty of time. The new theater did not open until February of 1812.

The gala opening of the new theater featured the performance of three of Kotzebue's dramas. The first, described as the Prologue, was entitled "King Stephan" or "Hungary's First Benefactor." The second, entitled "The elevation of Pest to be a Royal Sanctuary" was a replacement piece for a drama that turned out to be politically sensitive at the time. The final play was called an Epilogue and was entitled "The Ruins of Athens."

The report of the opening as published in Vienna on February 19, 1812, read, "The newly built Royal Municipal Theatre in Pest, having been completed with the utmost splendour, was opened ceremoniously on the 9th February. The opening performance, graced by tasteful external and internal lighting, commenced with a new Prologue with choruses... the conclusion was an Epilogue with songs and choruses... The Prologue and Epilogue were written specially for this occasion, upon request, by the celebrated dramatic poet Herr von Kotzebue, and were set to music by our praiseworthy composer van Beethoven. The audience was extremely large, and the applause general."

The overture to "King Stephan" and the overture and incidental music to "The Ruins of Athens" survive to the present day, but their success can hardly be described as overwhelming. Only the "Turkish March" from "The Ruins of Athens" and the two overtures were published during Beethoven's time. He later sold the two overtures to the Philharmonic Society of London as new works, so disappointing the Society that they instructed their agent, "for God's sake, don't buy anything from Beethoven!"

The drama of "King Stephan" celebrates the role that King Stephan I played in Hungarian history and then transfers that celebration to praise of Maria Theresa and the Emperor Franz. Beethoven's overture is festive and celebrative in its tone. The tempo changes give it form - slow, fast, slow, fast - with the musical materials of each opening section returning with the later changes of tempo. The mood is light and festive, leaving the listener in a similar state.

Gustav Mahler - Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen (Songs of a Wayfarer)

In 1875 Gustav Mahler travelled to Vienna to attend the Conservatory. Upon graduation, he embarked on a career as a conductor, leading orchestras for theaters and opera companies in small towns throughout Europe. As his reputation grew, he advanced to more prestigious appointments, coming at length to the leading opera houses in such cities as Prague, Leipzig, and Budapest. In 1897, Mahler became the maestro at the Vienna Court Opera. He conducted there with dictatorial control, but after ten years under Mahler's leadership, the Vienna Court Opera had been elevated to the pinnacle among Europe's opera companies.

Mahler's sojourn in Vienna brought him to the podium of the Vienna Philharmonic. He proved himself as skilled with the symphonic repertoire as he had with the opera literature. Along with the acclaim he received for his interpretative artistry also grew his reputation for unbending opinions of how works should be interpreted. His quest for perfection in performance often left him frustrated. It was frustration over what he viewed as continual compromise of artistic standards that led him to resign from the Vienna Court Opera in 1907. In January of 1908, Mahler made his debut in America, conducting the Metropolitan Opera on New Year's Day. The following year he became the principal conductor of the New York Philharmonic, a position he held along with his post at the Metropolitan Opera. The pressure, probably mostly self-imposed by his lofty standards, brought Mahler to the point of collapse in 1911. He left his conducting duties for treatment in Paris, but he knew the end had come and at his own request, returned to Vienna where he died on May 18, 1911.

Mahler has been described as continually suffering from Weltschmerz. Even, in writing about Mahler's emotional involvement with music, has said that Mahler "used tones to probe the meaning of life and death, to uncover the mysteries of nature. He was, it is true, often a brooding and prophetic, often extravagantly emotional man in his emotional outpourings. But he was also a noble prophet of life and grandeur of thought, profundity of concept, and intensity of emotion. Thus his greatest symphonies, while uneven in quality, are always a rewarding esthetic and emotional experience."

Mahler tended to approach all of his music as a symphonist, and he has been described as the last neo-Romantic in the form. He favors the orchestra as a medium of expression and the structures he devises are vast, allowing him to fill the vastness with his personal feelings, questionings, doubts, and struggles with spiritual problems. It is significant that his principal works involve the orchestra. He wrote nine symphonies and a series of well-known song cycles for solo voice and orchestra. The Songs of A Wayfarer fit the mold nicely. The set of four songs which comprise the cycle are entitled, "Wenn mein Schatz Hochzeit macht," "Ging heut morgen ubers Feld," "Ich hab's ein ghulend Messer," and lastly, "Die zwei bauen Augen von meinem Schatz." The songs are based on Mahler's own poetry, and the theme of the cycle was inspired by a love affair Mahler had with a woman named Johanna Richter. The music of the cycle also figured prominently in his First Symphony. A melodic passage from the second song serves as the principal theme of the opening movement of the symphony. A refrain from the fourth song appears in the slow movement. And other thematic material from throughout the cycle appears in the first and last movements of the symphony. Mahler would utilize this practice in later symphonies by incorporating melodies from his other song cycles into them.

Although much of Mahler's music was often imposing in structure and required massive forces to perform, The Songs of A Wayfarer is delightfully simple and straightforward, possibly reflecting the joys of romance from a time in the composer's life when emotions were simple and his lifestyle uncomplicated.

Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen
(Translation: Gustav Mahler)

When my sweetheat has her wedding,
I'm her merry wedding,
I have my day of mourning
I go into my little room
Dark little room,
Weep, weep for my sweetheat,
For my dear sweetheart
Flower of blue, flower of blue,
Do not wither, do not wither
Sweet bird, sweet bird,
You are singing on the green heath,
Ah, how fair the world is!
Cheep! Cheep!
Do not sing! Do not flower
Singing is over now
All singing is done with.
At evening when I go to sleep,
I think of my sweetheat,
Of my sweetheat.
2. Ging heut morgen übers Feld
Ging heut morgen übers Feld,
Tausend Bäume und Gräser bing,
Spruch zu mir der lust'ge Fink.

Ei du Guf! Guten Morgen! Ei du Guf!
Dah war's nicht eine schöne Welt?
Zink! Zink! Schön und linih!
Wir mir durch die Welt gefahrt!

Auch der Glaukhüs am Fuhl
Hat mir lustig, glaukling!
Mit den Glückskirchen, kling, kling,
Ihrem Morgengeschmael:

Was's nicht eine schöne Welt?
Kling! Kling! Schönes Ding!
Wir mir durch die Welt gefahrt!

Heih!
Und da fing im Sonnenschein
Gleich die Welt zu sinnkeln an.

Alles Ton und Farbe gewann
Im Sonnenschein.
Blum' und Vogel, groß und klein!
Guten Tag, is's nicht eine schöne Welt?

Da, da, da, da, da, da, da, da
Nun fängt auch mein Glück wohl an?

Nein, nein, das, ich mein,
Mir summern blättern kruh!

3. Ich hab' ein glühend Messer
Ich hab' ein glühend Messer,
Ein Messer in meiner Brust.
O geht Das schmeckt so tof
In jede Fenster und jede Lust.

Ach, was ist das für ein böser Gast!
Nimmer hält er Ruhe,
Nimmer hält er Rast,
Nicht bei Tag, noch bei Nacht.

O Weh!
Wenn ich in den Himmel seh',
Satt ich zwei bläse Augen seh',
O Weh! Wenn ich im gelben Felde geh',
Satt ich von ihm das blonde Haar
Im Weite wehen.

O Weh!
Wenn ich aus dem Traum auflebe
Und schöne Mienen in's Auge Lachen,
O Weh!
Ich wüß', ich lag auf der schwarzen Bahn',
Komm', nimmer die Augen aufmachen!

4. Die zwei blauen Augen von meinem Schatz
Die zwei blauen Augen von meinem Schatz,
Die haben mich in die weite Welt geschickt.
Da mach ich Abschied nehmen Vorn allerliebsten Platz.

O Augen blau, warum hast du mich angeblüm?
Nun hab' ich ewig Leid und Gränen.
Ich bin ausgegogen in stiller Nacht
Wohl über die dunkle Heide.
Hat mir manchmal Arzt gesagt

Adel! Mein Geselle war Lieb' und Leidet.
Auf der Straße steht ein Lindenbaum,
Da hab' ich zum ersten Mal im Schlaf geruht
Unter dem Lienen, mit Grün.

Seine Blüten über mich geschnitten,
Da wuß' ich nicht, wo das Leben tut.
War alles, war alles, war alles,
Und Welt und Traum!

a recitative-like passage, a dramatic effect which Haydn had used in his early works and which Beethoven used in the Ninth Symphony. The principal theme soon returns and, after its development, is again interrupted by the recitative idea as a pointer to the grand close.

Charles Ives - Symphony No. 3, "The Camp Meeting"

As this writer has mentioned on a prior occasion, scholars will probably continue to debate whether Charles Ives was a musical genius or simply a successful insurance man who dabbled in musical things, succeeding, because of his uniqueness, in creating the illusion of greatness. That debate may never be settled, but in the meantime, audiences continue to enjoy and respect his music.

In an essay on Emerson, Ives possibly summed up his own artistic view when he wrote: "His (Emerson's) underlying plan of work seems based on the large unity of a series of particular aspects of a subject rather than on the continuity of its expression. As thoughts surge to his mind, he fills the heavens with them, crowds them in, if necessary, but seldom arranges them along the ground first."

One hallmark of the music of Ives is its ability to capture or recreate in sound life experiences, many of which included actual music. Hence, the musical quotation became a prominent device. Every type of musical source material was fair game for Ives, as was every kind of performance. He seemed to delight in the sounds created by mix-ups, mistakes, wrong notes, and out-of-tune playing of amateur musicians, regarding it to be as "substantial" and "musical" as the perfection of professional musicians. In his instructions to his copyist for "The Fourth of July," the third of his New England Holidays, Ives warned, "Mr. Price: please don't try to make things nice! All the wrong notes are right. Just copy as I have I want it that way... Mr. Price: Band stuff - didn't always play right together & was as good either way."

When his Three Places in New England was first performed and the conductor, Nicolas Slonimsky, apologized for the ragged performance, Ives responded, "Just like a town meeting - every man for himself. Wonderful how it came out."

Ives wrote four symphonies, the first in 1896 and the last between 1910 and 1916. The most famous is the Third Symphony, subtitled "The Camp Meeting." Ives worked on the piece between 1901 and 1912, and it is generally believed to have been completed in 1904. It was not heard for more than forty years after its completion when Lou Harrison conducted the premiere in New York City on April 5, 1946. That performance met with critical acclaim. The work was so respected that it not only received the New York Music Critics Circle award for 1946, it was also awarded the Pulitzer Prize for music.

The inspiration for the work, and hence its subtitle, came out of Ives' experiences at camp meetings which were popular in Danbury, Connecticut, where Ives grew up. The work features hymn tune quotations throughout. In the first movement, Andante maestoso, the hymn "O For a Thousand Tongues" highlights the movement in a grand fugal treatment.

In the second movement, Largo, Ives explained that his intention was to depict a game played by children at the camp meeting while their elders are listening to the Holy Word. The finale, Allegro, uses "Just Am I" as its principal theme.

The use of cross rhythms, unusual progressions, and unorthodox tonalities long before it became a norm for avant-garde musical expression made the Ives Third Symphony stylistically remarkable. Just how unique the man was is perhaps best summed up by Virgil Thomson when he wrote that Ives "makes up his music out of whole cloth at home. He invents his own aesthetic. When his works turns out to be not unplayable technically, it often gives a useful kick in the pants to the professional tradition. The music of Charles Ives did that very vigorously indeed."
Franz Joseph Haydn - Sinfonia Concertante in B-Flat Major, Opus 84

The Sinfonia Concertante received its first performance on March 9, 1792 at the fourth of the Haydn-Salomon concerts. It is speculated that Salomon persuaded Haydn to write the work because of the popularity of the form as seen in the works of Ignaz Pleyel, Haydn’s pupil, who had been enticed to come to London by a group called Professional Concerts. This group was engaged in a bitter rivalry with Salomon for pre-eminence among concert promoters in London.

Professional Concerts had decided that bringing Pleyel to London would be a counter-attraction to Haydn’s popularity in London. The desired rivalry never developed. Pleyel arrived in London on December 23, 1791, dined with his former master a day later, and spent New Year’s Eve with Haydn. Haydn, in a letter to Marianne von Genzinger in Vienna: “He (Pleyel) conducted himself from the time he got here with such modesty that he won my heart all over again; we see a great deal of each other, share laurels, and shall return home happy and contented.” He went on to write of Pleyel’s promise to bring out a new work at each of his concerts: “I stated in public that I would do as much. To keep my word and not let poor Salomon down, I have had to spend several sleepless nights.” Hence, it was undoubtedly because Pleyel had presented a new Sinfonia Concertante for six instruments and orchestra on February 27 that Salomon was prompted to urge Haydn to write a similar work of his own.

Further credence is given to the above incident’s role in motivating Haydn to compose a sinfonia concertante. A review of Pleyel’s work published after the premier performance read: “The novelty of the evening was a Concertante by Pleyel, for six instruments. The subject extremely easy, airy and well calculated for the obligati of the different instruments which succeed each another - all varied with profound skill and producing the most delightful effects...Of...the Concertante it will be sufficiently of praise to say, that Haydn might own with honour these works of his Pupil. It was the triumph of both - the Master was there seemingly proud of his Work; the Scholar himself only second, was very sensibly affected by the applause.”

The March 9 premiere of Haydn’s venture into the form was so successful, a repeat performance was scheduled, due to audience demand, for the very next Salomon concert. First programmed as a “New Concerto M.S. for Violin, Violoncello, Oboe, and Bassoon by Haydn,” the title was changed to Concertante for its second performance. It was also included in the repertoire for the Haydn/Salomon concerts in the 1794 concert season. The Sinfonia Concertante is a work in three movements in the central key of B-flat Major, a favorite key of Haydn’s for many of his later works. It was also regarded as a novelty to write for trumpets and drums in the key of B-flat Major. The French musical writer, Marc Vignal, points out that Mozart never did, and he (Vignal) could only recall a single symphony of Michael Haydn that employed that scoring practice in the key of B-flat.

The first movement, Allegro, counterpoints two elements, a supple tune heard at the beginning of the work and contrasted with a series of energetic outbursts. A cadenza leads into the close of the movement. The second movement, Andante, is a duet in F Major, first for violin and bassoon and then for oboe and ‘cello, all over a pizzicato accompaniment in the strings.

The finale, Allegro con spirito, has barely begun when the solo violin interrupts with
OUR CONTRIBUTORS AND PATRONS

ASSOCIATE (to $24.00)

Richard Delean
Miss D. Del Duca
James Denman
Donna DiSciullo
Rick Downey
Margaret DesGuay
Tim & Virginia Dziekonski
Beth Fairclough
Dawn Faulkner
Curt Feig
Jack Field
Suzanne Fisher
Bjorg Fjeldstad
Thomas Fleming
Martin Forsety
Denis Foster
Jim Frazier
Ben Fuglevand
Pat Fuller
Becky Fuchs-Bailey
Edith Goetz
Mike Grady
Giles Greenfield
Roger Grimes
R.D. Gross
Diane Grover
Steve A. Grunert
Eric Guttormsen
Dana Haefli
Zack Hale
Tom Hart
Dale Heidal
Dirk Hein
Chaitanya Hein
Lani Henderson
Gayle Henry
Norm Hollingshead
Jane Hoonigrash
Rita Horuchi
Wisia Ingvardsen
Steven Iverson
Morris Jeffison
Randy Joe
David Johnson
John Johnson
LeLah Johnson
Ray & Marilyn Johnson
David & Lizann Jones
Greg Joyce
Pat Kasner
Bob Kasner
Elizabeth Kennedy
Rosa Kimble
Joanne Kirkland
Sabrina Kiv

F. & O. Klein
Annie & Joe Knight
Jeanne Kohl
Ken Kraning
Kate Kramer
Rachel LaCrosse
Dev Lawrence
Mike Lantker
Bryan Lowe
Shirley Lowe
Ellen Lund
Carin Maglie
Kim Marcus
Clara & William Marr
Teresa Allen Martin
Larry Martin
Rose Masters
Roberta McClelland
Betty McDougall
Virginia & Don McFelly
Cheryl McIntosh
Carolyn McKenran
Barbara McKnight
Chinn Mei-Hwang
Jean Middleton
Bob Mitchell
Maria Monckey
Marion Morrow
Karen Murphy
John Nelson
V. Ness
Terry Newberg
Elliot Newman
Aaron Nicholson
Gary Niles Nickly
Annette Norman
Carol North
Susan O'Brien
Teressa O'Bryan Wilson
Joanne O'Hara
Samantha Olson
Marilyn Orozco
Laura Lee Oswald
Paula Parks
M.A. Parmet
Jack Pedoby
Evelyn Peslak
Cathy Peda
Robert Pepe
Shari & Dan Peterson
Glenda Pettengill
Lisa Phelps
Loretta Phillips
Jean Pinkham
Connie Pius
Robert Pope
Barbara Post
Barbry Powers
Maybeth Pressley
Heather Preston

Art Pringle
Maurice Prichard
Chuck Raplee
Carolyn Rasch
Jim Readon
Joan Reed
Stan Reed
Susan Renning
Virginia Richmond
Watson Rinde
Paul Riley
Nancy Rivenburgh
Carrie Robinson
H.K. Rowe
Jim & Jeanne Rowland
Keith Ruby
Gretchen Sanger
Deborah Schiro
Sandy Schleis
Lisa Schutz
Marilyn Sharp
Chris Shephard
Bob & Melissa Shogren
Kemper & Jo Simmons
Dona Sizemore
Howie Slusson
Jeff Sluytek/Ann Noris
Elaine Smith
Eugene Smith
Wilma Sproul
John Stenseth
Betty Strahlau
Mary Straka
Laverne Suggenheimer
D. Sullivan
Miyo Tsutsumi
Solly Terrana
Fred & Edith Thirlle
Judy Thayer
Laura Theesvitz
Gail Thompson
Sara Throackmorton
Grace Tracy
Harley Tuck
Carl Uh lmnn
Dan Uhlmnn
John Urbach
Meg Voedich
Mark & Ingrid Webber
Catherine Westergard
Joella Weybright
Irene White
Wendy White
Monte Wilham
Carol Wiesbach
Jackie Wolfe
Pearl Wolfe
Jean Woolridge
Richard Wyckoff
Carol Yurkin

Sunday, March 13, 1988
Kane Hall

PROGRAM

Miona concertante
Allegro
Andante
Allegro con spirito

Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen
Wenn mein Schatz Hochzeit macht
Ging heut morgen ubers Feld
Ich hab' ein gluhend Messer
Die zwei blauen Augen von meinem Schatz

INTERMISION

Symphony No. 3, "The Camp Meeting"
"Old Folks Gatherin:' Andante maestoso
"Children's Day:" Allegro
"Communion:" Largo

King Stephen Overture

The Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers would deeply appreciate your gift of support.
Contributions may be sent to: BS/SCS, 2115 N. 42nd, Seattle, WA 98103, (206) 547-0427.
The collaboration of the BROADWAY SYMPHONY and the SEATTLE CHAMBER SINGERS has become a respected musical force in the Pacific Northwest. This company of volunteer artists is dedicated to the presentation of exciting and polished musical performances. Each ensemble rehearses at University Unitarian Church, where they enjoy the status of artists-in-residence, and where they further develop their repertoire under conductor George Shangrow. Membership is by audition, and general auditions for vacant positions are held every August and September. On several occasions each season, smaller ensembles are formed from the main ensembles for the performance of chamber music. Especially important to the Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers is the support and presentation of local performing artists and the work of local composers.

GEORGE SHANGROW, Music Director and Conductor of the Broadway Symphony and Seattle Chamber Singers, is a native of Seattle who founded the chorus (in 1968) and the orchestra (in 1978) in order to give Seattle artists and audiences a chance to hear and perform great works of music. In addition to acclaimed performances of the classical music repertoire for both chorus and orchestra, he has brought to Seattle world premiers of operas, choral works, and symphonies by Seattle's most gifted local composers. Mr. Shangrow has toured Europe as a conductor and keyboard artist; appeared as a guest conductor with the Seattle Symphony, the Northwest Chamber Orchestra, and East Texas University Opera; and lectures frequently for the Seattle Opera and Symphony. As Director of Music for University Unitarian Church, Mr. Shangrow is a leader in the performance of sacred music, and as the guiding producer of The Bach Year in Seattle (1985) he brought to our city the world's most extensive celebration of the music of J. S. Bach.

Baritone BRIAN BOX is a native of Washington and received his Master of Music degree in vocal performance from Western Washington University. He recently performed Songs of a Wayfarer for a performance of Nureyev and Friends with the Oregon Symphony under the direction of Maestro Shangrow. Mr. Box has performed with the Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers in such works as Bach's Christmas Oratorio, Coffee Cantata, Peasant Cantata, and Hunting Cantata. He has also sung for two years with Seattle Opera’s Education Program, performing children’s opera throughout the state.

The Young Chang is the official piano of the Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers. They are provided for us by Western Piano & Organ, Young Chang’s largest representative in the United States.

The Broadway Symphony
George Shangrow, conductor

The Young Chang is the official piano of the Broadway Symphony/Seattle Chamber Singers. They are provided for us by Western Piano & Organ, Young Chang's largest representative in the United States.

THE BROADWAY SYMPHONY/SEATTLE CHAMBER SINGERS
George Shangrow, conductor
Sara Hedgepeth, business manager
2115 North 42nd
Seattle, WA 98103
(206) 547-0427
1988
The Broadway Symphony
and
The Seattle Chamber Singers

George Shangrow, Conductor

Apr.  1:  J. S. Bach's St. John Passion
         7:00 pm  Meany Hall, UW

Apr. 10: Bach's Music from the Court at Kothen  II
         2:00 pm  Olympic 4 Seasons Hotel

May  8:  Bach's Music from the Court at Kothen  III
         2:00 pm  Olympic 4 Seasons Hotel

May 15: Orchestral works by Mozart, Holst, Robert Kechley
         8:00 pm  Kane Hall, UW

Jun.  5:  Schubert Mass in E-Flat
         Vaughan Williams Flos Campi
         8:00 pm  Kane Hall, UW

For concert details and ticket information call 547-0427